A New Reality

Are you unemployed now or facing unemployment or a layoff in the near future? If so, you're in the same position as many other workers in the Greater Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky region who have recently lost their jobs or whose jobs are at risk.

In situations like this, it's not uncommon to feel helpless and frightened and that circumstances are beyond your control. That's a natural reaction and, to some extent, it's true. But there are things you can do to deal with the pressures and problems that come with joblessness.

To deal effectively with your situation, you need to be aware of your rights and responsibilities, as well as the eligibility requirements for the programs for which you may qualify. You should take steps to secure whatever help you need right away. People who tend to cope the best with unemployment are those who waste no time seeking out any and all resources.

This guide is intended to answer some questions you may be asking yourself. It also provides some basic information concerning resources that are available in your community to assist you during this difficult time.

If you need help, but don't know where to turn, call United Way 211 by dialing 2-1-1; in Brown County, call 1-800-233-HELP; in Middletown, call 513-727-3215; in Dearborn County, call 812-432-6200. Trained information and referral specialists who understand and care will give you information about available human services. This is a free and confidential service.

You May Be Asking Yourself...

Why me?

Given the importance work plays in most peoples' lives, being unemployed may leave you with feelings of rejection, loneliness, depression, and even anger toward yourself and your loved ones. Your feelings of anxiety about bills and your family's future are a natural reaction to the stress you are under right now. During this time, it's important to remember that you aren't alone – most people who lose their jobs share your feelings.

How will my family be affected?

One of the most important things you can do to ease the strain of unemployment is to share your feelings honestly and openly with your family. Your spouse and children are affected by your situation as much as you are, and good communication with family members and other close friends is a vital part of the emotional support you need right now. Talking together about the problems you face is essential to help you feel less isolated as you plan your next step.

Food

If you have a child in school, she/he may be eligible for subsidized school lunches. Apply at the school where your child is enrolled. In addition, even if you are receiving unemployment benefits, you may be eligible for food stamps.

You may also be eligible to receive food from a local food pantry. Call United Way 211 by dialing 2-1-1 for the food stamp office or pantry nearest you.

Health Services

In most cases, group health insurance ends within 30 days of termination. However, under a 1985 federal law called COBRA (Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act), laid off employees have a right to continue their group health coverage for 18 additional months at their own expense. Check with your employer about how you can continue your health insurance coverage under this law.

Priority Plan is Blue Cross/Blue Shield-administered temporary health insurance with coverage between 30-180 days. Call 1-800-442-1832 for rates and further information.

Publicly supported health centers are also available and offer general and specialized medical care and, in some areas, dental services. For further information about health services in your area, call United Way 211 by dialing 2-1-1.

If you have served in the armed services, you may be eligible to receive services through:

Housing Services

It's extremely important that you contact your lender or landlord when you are unable to pay your mortgage or rent. Let them know about your current situation and try to work out an alternative payment arrangement acceptable to both of you. Don't panic. You have time to seek advice from housing counselors (listed below) and legal experts (see "Legal Services").

Help With Utilities

Because of the vital role that utilities – gas, electricity, water, and telephone – play in your family's security and well-being, it's particularly important that you contact the companies as soon as you know that you're going to have difficulty paying your bills. Acting before you are several months behind may help you avoid shutoffs. Most companies are willing to work out an alternative payment plan with you.

During the winter months, you may be able to qualify for financial assistance with heating bills through the Emergency Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP). In Ohio, low-income households may qualify for the Percentage Income Plan (PIP) as a payment alternative to paying your entire energy bill each month. For further information about utilities assistance programs and where to call in your area, call United Way 211 by dialing 2-1-1.

Consumer Credit Counseling

As in the case of utility and housing payments, reputable lenders are more interested in receiving money owed to them than they are in harassing you. They understand that difficulties can arise and know that an amended schedule of payments worked out to the satisfaction of both parties is by far the best way of promoting full payment. Once again, it's essential that you contact your creditor or your creditor's servicing agent as soon as you know that a loan or bill will be behind. Creditors will be particularly responsive to alternative arrangements by a person who has established a good record of payment.
